Major Problem:

Lack of Organized Wealth

- People of African Descent in America:
 - have relatively high purchasing power: approx. $1 trillion annually
 - this purchasing power is mostly not used in a manner that creates wealth
 - have relatively little wealth (less than 1% of the wealth in America)
 - only 3% of our consumer purchases are from Black-owned businesses
 - do not own most banks in which we deposit our money
 - spend higher percentages of our money on consumer products than others
 - entertainment, electronic equipment, hair care products, etc.
 - our money circulates in our communities less than 1 time before leaving
 - 6 times for Latinos; 9 times for Asians; unlimited times for Whites
 - have limited capacity to offer employment opportunities for our communities
- Africa is the richest continent in the world in terms of mineral resources
 - due to the history of exploitation, these mineral resources have mostly not been used to build wealth and produce prosperity for African/Black communities
- The result of all of the above is economic weakness and related problems, including the lack of ability to be self-sufficient and empowered to ensure our future well-being

Solution: Organizing Funding for Economic Empowerment

- APPEAL's planned development of a banking institution in the form of a credit union to finance ownership and wealth creation for communities of people of African descent, along with our financial education and financial services resource bank, offer the prospect of solutions to these problems
- APPEAL's workshops in financial literacy educate people about personal, family and community financial management and economic empowerment; our financial services resource bank provides hands-on assistance for improving finances.
- A key distinction between APPEAL's planned credit union and other banking institutions will be our focus on leveraging our community's deposits to:
 - provide funding for land and business development that builds the capacity to own the production, distribution and retailing of goods and services that Black communities consume, and produce employment and training opportunities, thus creating an economic infrastructure for Black communities to build wealth and become empowered, self-sufficient and prosperous
 - provide funding for business ventures and projects that result in the increased utilization of Africa's mineral wealth for the benefit of African/Black people and communities

Major Problem: Inadequate Education

- Inadequate education and miseducation (improper education) contribute to the following problems among people of African descent:
 - high dropout rates
 - high incarceration rates
 - lack of awareness that Africans were pioneers of advanced knowledge, culture and civilization in the world, preceding Greek Philosophy, etc.
 - lack of knowledge of Black Wall Street, Marcus Garvey's movement and Pan-Africanism as examples of quality efforts for self-sufficiency and empowerment despite overt racism
 - Internalization of being taught indirectly that our heritage and lineage are not as good or valuable as others, which often contributes to low self-esteem, low achievement, and/or self-destructive behavior
 - lack of knowledge of the value of what was lost through the long history of conquest, colonization, enslavement and miseducation
 - lack of knowledge of what there is to gain through efforts to learn and practice African cultural principles such as Maat and Nguzo Saba (Kwanzaa principles), including unity, self-determination and cooperative economics
 - lack of knowledge of what there is to gain through efforts to facilitate increased use of Africa's mineral wealth to benefit African/Black communities

Solution: Educational Enrichment Facilitating Empowerment

- APPEAL's provision of high-quality educational workshops in history and culture, along with our think tank providing critical analysis of contemporary issues, offer the prospect of solutions to these problems
- Internationally renowned historian, author and educator Anthony T. Browder, a member of APPEAL's Board of Directors, is playing a key role in APPEAL's educational component and leading some of our workshops along with other high quality, experienced presenters
- These workshops address the lack of knowledge of important aspects of history, culture, and current events, and help to enrich people with profound information that is useful for life improvement and empowerment on personal, family and community levels
- Our think tank provides high-quality analysis and is designed to serve as a hub for progressive thought regarding important socio-economic issues, providing useful information that helps to inform APPEAL's strategic actions towards economic empowerment and educational enrichment for people of African descent

Founder & Executive Director

Lasana K. Mack

- Treasurer of the District of Columbia (Washington, DC) for seven years (2005-2012), a position comparable to a state treasurer and city treasurer due to DC's unique municipal status

APPEAL

Definition & Mission

Association of People for
Pan-Africanist
Economic
Advancement thru
Leverage

What Is Pan-Africanist Economic Advancement thru Leverage?

- Pan-Africanism is a concept that represents the perspective that people of African descent (i.e., “Black people” or “African people”) in America, in Africa and around the world represent a broad ethnic group and a broad extended family with a common African-based heritage, and that it is important for this extended family to take certain unified and collective actions to improve our plight in our communities, locally, nationally and internationally, in terms of economic, political, social, cultural and educational status and conditions.
- Leverage is a physics term and a finance term that conveys utilizing a pivotal device, utilizing a strategic advantage, or utilizing credit strategically in order to produce favorable or enhanced outcomes.

Leverage

APPEAL, Incorporated is a non-profit corporation and an association with 501(c)(3) tax-exempt status.

APPEAL

Definition & Mission

MISSION

- Combining these two terms with a focus on economic advancement defines APPEAL and produces its mission.
- APPEAL's mission is to organize and strategically utilize the vast resources of people of African descent, locally, nationally and globally, to facilitate economic empowerment and educational enrichment to produce strong, self-sufficient and prosperous communities.

Economic Advancement

MARCUS GARVEY; “BLACK WALL STREET”

- Here are a few important historical examples of Pan-Africanist economic advancement:
- Marcus Garvey led a movement in the early 1900s to build economically viable and self-sufficient Black communities internationally after observing that Black people were on the bottom rung of society's ladder around the world, including in Africa under European colonial rule. Garvey's movement was remarkably successful for several years but was ultimately derailed and the need for Black economic self-reliance remained mostly unmet.
- Also in the early 1900s, in Tulsa, Oklahoma, in what came to be known as Black Wall Street and “Little Africa”, there was an economically successful Black community with land ownership, its own bank, stores, schools and transportation system, and the community was economically enriched and empowered. There were other similar Black communities in the U.S., which were derailed by racist attack and/or the effects of integration.

Economic Advancement

AFRICAN INDEPENDENCE; KWAME NKRUMAH

- Kwame Nkrumah, the first President of Ghana as it gained independence from British colonial rule 1957, led a movement for African liberation from the oppression and economic exploitation of colonialism and neo-colonialism, under which Africa's vast mineral wealth was/is accessed and utilized for the primary benefit of those other than Africa's indigenous people. Nkrumah stressed African unity as a means to success.
- In this movement for Pan-African political and economic freedom, independence and self-sufficiency, Nkrumah was joined by other African leaders such as Guinea President Sekou Toure, Tanzania President Julius Nyerere and Congo Prime Minister Patrice Lumumba. But this movement was also ultimately derailed by external and internal forces, as is dramatically represented by Lumumba's assassination in 1961 and the subsequent tragic conditions in the mineral-rich Congo from then up to today.

Economic Advancement

PRESENT-DAY CHALLENGES

- Today, the need for Economic Advancement still exists. Although much has changed, Black people are, in general, still on the bottom rung of society's socio-economic ladder in America and around the world.
- Africa is the richest continent in the world in terms of mineral resources, but that mineral wealth is still largely not utilized for the collective benefit of African/Black people.
- Financial and economic self-sufficiency and empowerment are still acute needs for people of African descent, locally, nationally and globally. Helping to facilitate this is at the heart of APPEAL's mission. Please join us! We are asking you—we are appealing to you—to support this important endeavor!
- We want to be clear, for the record, that the mission of APPEAL (and the mission of Pan-Africanism in general) are not against or anti- any other race or ethnic group; we are simply for our own advancement and prosperity. We understand that the broad ethnic group and extended family that is African/Black people still needs a strong, productive and effective financial and economic foundation, and educational foundation, that we currently do not sufficiently have, if we are to address the major problems, challenges and weaknesses that exist in many of our communities. We think that all knowledgeable people of good will should be able to recognize and support this conclusion! Join Us!

APPEAL Activities

To accomplish its mission, APPEAL's activities include:

Providing “financial literacy” educational programs and resources

Providing “historical and cultural literacy” educational programs and resources

Having a “think tank” to analyze and address important socio-economic issues

Planning to launch a credit union to provide banking services for its members and facilitate financial and economic self-sufficiency, empowerment and prosperity

- APPEAL's Financial Literacy Workshops Cover the Following Topics:
 - Budgeting, Saving, and Investing to Build Assets
 - How to Use Credit Responsibly and Benefit from It
 - How to Achieve Home Ownership and Invest in Real Estate
 - Techniques for Building Wealth and Achieving Financial Independence
 - Gentrification: The Economics Behind Urban America's Changing Complexion
 - Tools for Black Business Enterprise Development

 - Rites of Passage: Keys to Maturing and Developing through Life's Important Stages
 - History of Economic Systems; What is the Best Model for Economic Empowerment for People of African Descent?

- Renowned historian, author and educator Anthony T. Browder, a member of APPEAL's Board of Directors, is a key member APPEAL's educational component and leads some of our workshops, along with other experienced and well-qualified subject-matter experts.

- APPEAL has established a think tank to analyze and address socio-economic issues
- APPEAL's Think Tank produces position papers—written analyses on topics relevant to the socio-economic conditions of people of African descent, and serves as a hub for the exchange of progressive and Pan-Africanist thought and ideas. Maurice Carney, Executive Director of Friends of the Congo, is serving in a leadership capacity with our think tank and is also leading some of our Historical & Cultural Literacy workshops.
 - Think Tank topics of analysis include:
 - Development of a “Cooperative Economics” Model and Plan for Empowerment
 - Why Is APPEAL Necessary?
 - A Socio-Economic Analysis of Urban America
 - Exploitation of Africa's Wealth of Natural Resources
 - Mis-Education of People of African Descent
 - What is Pan-Africanism and Why is it Necessary?

The Planned Credit Union

APPEAL Federal Credit Union

- One of APPEAL's objectives is the creation of a credit union for its membership, to be named APPEAL Federal Credit Union (AFCU).
- AFCU plans to pursue operating as an on-line banking institution, accessible to APPEAL members wherever they may be located, with state-of-the-art on-line operations. We also plan to open physical branches in various locations, starting with Washington, DC, where APPEAL is based.

The Planned Credit Union

APPEAL Federal Credit Union

- Unlike banks, credit unions are owned jointly by all members, and thus are not operated to generate a profit for a relatively small ownership or shareholder group as banks are. AFCU intends to utilize all of its resources to efficiently provide financial services and products to its members at relatively favorable rates. Any AFCU profits would be reinvested in AFCU for the benefit of members, or distributed to members in the form of dividends.
- There is a broad-based movement to withdraw support from big banks and move money into local and community-based financial institutions that provide more advantageous financial services and a better opportunity for people and communities to control their financial and economic futures, and APPEAL's creation of a credit union is consistent with that dynamic.
- AFCU is planned to be established based on an Associational Common Bond, meaning that members of APPEAL, Inc., a non-profit association, will have the benefit of being eligible to become members of AFCU.

The Planned Credit Union

APPEAL Federal Credit Union

- AFCU plans to be a full-service credit union, a financial institution offering a complete array of banking services and products, similar to a typical bank.
- Services to be provided by AFCU are expected to include:
 - Checking and savings accounts
 - On-line banking
 - Various investment instruments for depositors
 - through third-party networking arrangements in accordance with federal securities law guidelines
 - Credit and debit cards
 - Automobile loans
 - Home improvement loans
 - Home mortgage loans
 - Business loans and investments—locally, nationally and internationally—targeted towards meeting APPEAL's mission
- A portion of AFCU's loans and leveraging of depositor funds will be targeted to:
 - Finance business development to build infrastructure for economically self-sufficient Black/African communities
 - Facilitate increased utilization of Africa's mineral wealth for the benefit of African/Black people and communities

Note: In accordance with current law, AFCU's business loans would be limited to the lesser of 12.25% of total assets and 1.75 times the net worth of the credit union.
